

Three blooms of magic, each unique,
Five of each you'll need to seek.

A Passionbell blooms in colors untold,
Shaped by the stories and feelings it holds.
Songs of sorrow, joy, or ire
A bloom of each is what's required

Candystems dance, so lively and bright,
With stems so tart and buds of delight.
"Eat me!" they call, then flee from your hand,
A chase for a treat, both sweet and unplanned.

A Star Blossom glows with delicate grace,
A bloom like the heavens in time and in space.
But touch just once, and the petals fall,
Leaving a light that outshines them all.

In dark hills and boughs, 3 mushrooms grow,
Three of each you'll need to stow.

Butterfly Saddle, golden and bright,
Rich as butter, a savory bite.
Shaped like a seat, so smooth and wide,
A saddle for creatures with nowhere to ride.

An Eldercap stands, wrinkled and tall,
Warted and gray, not fair at all.
One single bite, and youth will fade
In twilight lands where music played

Hummingbrella, dripping so sweet,
A feast for the birds, a nectar-treat.
Its colors dance against dark skies
A helpful thing, the healer's prize

A Siren's Scale, sleek with color,
Glimmers like songs on the water.
Trade with a trickster, or fight if you dare,
But beware the voice that pollutes the air.

Two wish-born stones, both good and grim,
One kept with care, the other dim.

A wish made pure, with heart so bright,
Hidden below in crystal light.
Prospectors guard it, polished with care,
Trade for its glow, if your heart is fair.

A wish of greed, of spite, of woe,
Buried deep where shadows grow.
The prospectors shun it, leave it to fate,
Dig if you dare, but bear its weight.

A golden egg on island high,
Born beneath a remorseful sky.
Made by greed, then cast away,
A prize to take, but not to stay.

A tear that falls, soft as a sigh,
From sorrow's well, where lovers lie.
Wept in mourning, born of pain,
Flowing gently like a quiet rain.